

Request for Internship or Individual Study to be considered for General Education Citizenship, Community, Service category

Academic Service Learning is an experiential learning strategy that facilitates the integration of academic knowledge to support people and organizations in community in meaningful and reciprocal ways. Through internships and independent studies that involve service learning, students will have the opportunity to grow in character, efficacy, and application.

In service-learning, students learn from active involvement with community projects and organizations. They contribute skills and knowledge to community needs while integrating the experiential knowledge they gain with their academic studies. Service-learning helps students transcend the classroom boundaries and traditional forms of learning, resulting in development of mutually rewarding civic ties and enhanced social understanding.

GE CC Category- Students may use internships/independent studies (totaling 3 credits) to complete the GE CC category if the internship meets the approval of both the Internship Program and the Office of the Vice Provost for Undergraduate Education. This approval must be given in advance. No retroactive internship or independent study credit for this category may be awarded.

To meet the criteria for the CC category, internships and independent studies must fall within the definition of service learning focused on community and/or civic engagement

In order for an Internship or Individual Study to be considered for approval to complete the General Education Citizenship, Community, Service category, you must read and complete this form, attach a copy of the Internship or Individual Study form, and submit it to regforms@chapman.edu.

Approval will only be given if this form is submitted prior to or within 2 weeks of beginning the internship or individual study. No retroactive approval will be given.

Service-learning is not the same as interning to obtain job experience or providing volunteer work only. To be considered as a service-learning experience for the purpose of completing the CC category, the service in which the student is engaged must focus on community engagement AND include an academic component.

Typically, the service-learning opportunity will be with:

- a nonprofit organization,
- a community-based organization
- an educational institution, or
- a governmental institution.

In some cases, service-learning may involve work that provides service to underserved populations outside of the traditional nonprofit structure. Service-learning work is unpaid.

The following will NOT be considered for CC credit:

- Work with for-profit companies (usually a .com company) will not be considered.
- Work that has no service-learning component will not be considered.
- Internships focused primarily on obtaining job skills and experience will not be approved.
- Clinical or Practicum hours in preparation for advanced graduate studies or certification are not eligible for CC status.

All CC approved internships and individual studies must include an academic component such as:

- research papers
- public presentations
- journals
- reflection papers
- other as approved by advisor

Such academic elements are determined in consultation with the faculty academic advisor and must be described in full on the application form. The advising faculty member's signature is required.

Credits- The number of credits that can be allocated for service-learning CC credit is determined as follows:

- Internships: 1 credit is given for every 40 hours of work: hours working on-site and working on the academic component.
- Individual Studies: 1 credit is the equivalent of 45 contact hours per semester. Contact hours include time on-site, meetings with advisor, and/or research and preparation of academic component(s).

Allocation of hours should be clarified explicitly in application.
