About the Council

The Italian Studies Council aims to support Italian Studies at Chapman University by raising students' awareness regarding the potential applications of their studies in various areas of cultural, artistic, and business entrepreneurship. Italophiles, regardless of heritage, are welcome to join the Italian Studies Council general membership. Council members engage with events, and community outreach, focusing on the Italian Studies program at Chapman University.

The Institute Leadership Board is a non-governmental think tank comprised of philanthropic supporters who engage in strategic and network development for the Ferrucci Institute for Italian Experience and Research.
