Overview

Chapman University engaged SSRS to conduct the 2017 wave of The Chapman University Survey on American Fears (CSAF). Chapman University initiated this nationwide poll on what strikes fear in Americans in 2014. The primary objective of this survey is to collect annual data on the fears, worries and concerns of Americans, the personal, behavioral and attitudinal characteristics related to those fears, and how those fears are associated with other attitudes and behaviors.

The CSAF is a project of the Earl Babbie Research Center in the Wilkinson College of Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences at Chapman University. The Earl Babbie Research Center is dedicated to using a variety of social science research methods to examine critical social, behavioral, economic and environmental problems.

CSAF was conducted online via the SSRS Probability Panel and invited adults age 18 and older to participate via the web. It included 1,207 participants and data collection was conducted from June 28 to July 7, 2017.

This report provides information about the sampling procedures and the methods used to collect, process, and weight data for the 2017 wave of the CSAF.

SSRS has a staff of more than 90 full time employees including programmers, coders, project managers, and operational directors and more than 300 telephone interviewers in multiple sites across the nation.

SSRS designs and implements research solutions to complex strategic, tactical, public opinion, and policy issues in the U.S. and in more than 40 countries worldwide. The SSRS team specializes in creative problem-solving and informed analysis to meet its clients' research goals. SSRS provides the complete set of analytical, administrative and management capabilities needed for successful project execution. We partner with clients interested in conducting high-quality research. In the industry, SSRS is renowned for its sophisticated sample designs and its experience with all facets of data collection, including those involving multimodal formats. SSRS also has extensive statistical and analytical capabilities for extracting important insights from the survey data and suggesting strategies based on those insights.

Questionnaire Design

Chapman University provided the survey instrument to SSRS. SSRS reviewed the survey instrument and provided feedback. Together, SSRS and the Chapman University team worked to finalize the questionnaire.

Upon final approval, SSRS formatted and programmed the survey for completion online. Additional steps were employed to ensure a quality experience in survey administration regardless of the device utilized by respondents, whether a desktop computer, tablet or phone.

Sample Design: The SSRS Probability Panel

This survey was conducted using the SSRS Probability Panel. SSRS Panel members are recruited randomly from a dual-frame random digit dial (RDD) sample, through the SSRS Omnibus Survey. The SSRS Omnibus survey is a national (50-state), bilingual telephone survey designed to meet standards of quality associated with custom research studies. The SSRS Omnibus runs six waves each month. Each wave consists of 1,000 interviews, of which 600 are obtained with respondents on their cell phones, and approximately 35 interviews completed in Spanish.

This recruiting design relies on an existing, high-quality survey platform resulting in an affordable probabilistically-sourced panel. Respondents of the SSRS Omnibus represent the full U.S. adult population (English and Spanish speaking). From this base, SSRS screens for Internet access and then recruits those who have access to be part of the SSRS Probability Panel.

From each SSRS Omnibus wave of about 1,000 respondents, approximately 85% are identified as having Internet access and are invited to participate in the Panel. Of these, approximately 45% agree to participate and provide their email address. These numbers vary slightly from wave to wave. Non-internet sample can be interviewed via telephone, if requested.<sup>1</sup>

SSRS panelists are asked to complete one to two surveys per month.

Data Collection

Survey Sampling

All sample members drawn for the CSAF were adult, English-language panelists. Sample drawn for the CSAF was stratified by education due to greater non-response by panelists with lower education.

Survey Administration Procedures

Surveys conducted using the SSRS Probability Panel are self-administered web surveys. In appreciation for their participation, panelists receive a modest incentive for participation (in the form of an electronic Amazon gift card or cash sent via postal mail according to respondent preference). Depending on the field period, reminder emails are sent to panelists who do not complete the survey after being sent the initial invitation.

For the CSAF study, the survey administration schedule was as follows:

Touchpoint	Date
Soft launch invitation	6/28/2017
Full launch invitation	6/29/2017
Field Close	7/7/2017

A “soft launch” inviting a limited number of panelists to participate was conducted on June 28th. After checking soft launch data to ensure that all questionnaire content and skip patterns were correct. Additional sample was released to ensure the final sample was representative.

<sup>1</sup> All interviews for the CSAF study was completed online; weighting procedures incorporate a propensity model to account for non-internet households so that estimates can be projectable to the full U.S. population.

The median length<sup>2</sup> of the CSAF survey was 24 minutes.

Panelists were emailed an invitation to complete the CSAF survey online. The email for each respondent included a unique passcode-embedded link. In appreciation for their participation, panelists received a seven dollar incentive (in the form of an electronic Amazon gift card or a cash sent via postal mail depending upon respondent preference). Panelists not responding to their first invitation received a reminder email three days after the initial invitation. Two additional rounds of reminders were then sent every two days to those who had not yet completed the survey. A total of three reminders were sent to all non-responders, as well as to any panelists who started, but did not complete, the survey.

As a standard of practice for Probability Panel surveys, several quality checks were incorporated into the survey. For CSAF, these included asking respondents to select a specific response when viewing a list of items, as well as re-asking the same factual type question later in the survey. Respondents who failed the quality checks employed were not included in the final data set.

As standard practice on web surveys, respondents were allowed to skip any question they did not wish to answer; however, high rates of non-response can be correlated with poor data quality. Notably, 77% of respondents answered 100% of all survey questions, with no one completing less than 89% of the entire questionnaire.

N Sampled for Survey	N Completed Survey	Final N After Quality Control Removals <sup>3</sup>
7,972	1,307	1,207

The final breakdown based on device used to complete the survey was as follows:

Device	N Completed Survey
Desktop computer	574
Mobile phone	547
Tablet	84

Response Rate/Cooperation Rate

Response rates are one method used to assess the quality of a survey, as they provide a measure of how successfully the survey obtained responses from the sample. The American Association of Public Opinion Research (AAPOR) has established standardized methods for calculating response rates (AAPOR, 2008). As noted previously, SSRS Panel members are recruited randomly from SSRS Omnibus. The Response Rate for SSRS Omnibus is typically 8%. As noted above, of the Omnibus respondents who are invited to join the SSRS Probability Panel, approximately 45% agree to become part of the panel. Typical cooperation (i.e., completion) rates obtained by the SSRS Probability Panel range from 15% - 20%. The CSAF completion rate is 16%.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The mean length of the survey was 29 minutes and the modal length was 23 minutes.

<sup>3</sup> The N=100 cases were removed due failing two of three quality control questions that were embedded into the survey (N=92), speeding (i.e., surveys completed in less than 10 minutes, N=3), and failing both the quality checks, as well as the speed parameter employed (N=5).

Data Processing and Integration

SSRS implemented several quality assurance procedures in data file preparation and processing. In addition to extensive testing of the web survey prior to the launching data collection, random data were generated to ensure that skip patterns were working correctly. After the soft launch, survey data were carefully checked for accuracy, completeness, and non-response to specific questions so that any issues could be identified and resolved prior to the full launch.

The data file programmer implemented a “data cleaning” procedure in which web survey skip patterns were created in order to ensure that all questions had the appropriate numbers of cases. This procedure involved a check of raw data by a program that consisted of instructions derived from the skip patterns designated on the questionnaire. The program confirmed that data were consistent with the definitions of codes and ranges and matched the appropriate bases of all questions. The CSAF survey included only two conditional questions requiring skip logic.

Weighting

This study, using sample selected from the SSRS Probability Panel, was weighted to provide nationally representative and projectable estimates of the adult population 18 years of age and older. The weighting process takes into account the recruitment of panelists through the SSRS Omnibus, thus the disproportionate probabilities of household and respondent selection due to the number of separate telephone landlines and cellphones answered by Omnibus respondents and their households, as well as the probability associated with the random selection of an individual household member. In addition, a propensity score for joining the SSRS Probability Panel is applied for all respondents of SSRS Omnibus and used as a base-weight for those panelists that complete the survey. Following application of the above weights, the sample was post-stratified and balanced by key demographics such as age, race, sex, region, and education. The sample was also weighted to reflect the distribution of phone usage in the general population, meaning the proportion of those who are cell phone only, landline only, and mixed users. The weighting procedures included three stages, detailed below.

1. Total Probability of Selection Weight (Wps)

SSRS Omnibus Baseweight

The original SSRS Omnibus inserts were weighted to provide nationally representative and projectable estimates of the adult population 18 years of age and older. The weighting process takes into account the disproportionate probabilities of household and respondent selection due to the number of separate telephone landlines and cellphones answered by respondents and their households, as well as the probability associated with the random selection of an individual household member.

- (1) Probability of Selection (Pphone): A phone number’s probability of selection depends on the number of phone-numbers selected out of the total sample frame. So for each respondent whose household has a landline phone number, this is calculated as total landline numbers dialed divided by total numbers in the landline frame and conversely for respondents answering at least one cell phone number, this is calculated as total cell phone numbers divided by total numbers in the cell phone frame.
- (2) Probability of Contact (Pcontact): The probability that the sampling unit (households on landlines or respondents on cell phone) will be reached is a product of the number of phones (by type) a respondent or their household answer.
- (3) Probability of Respondent selection (Pselect): In households reached by landline, a single respondent is selected. Thus, the probability of selection within a household is inversely related to the number of adults in the household.

Total Probability of Selection: This is calculated as the phone number’s probability of selection (by frame), multiplied by the number of devices of each type the respondent answers, and for landlines, divided by the number of adults in the household.

Thus, for each respondent a probability can be calculated for being reached via landline (LL<sub>prob</sub>) and for being reached via cell phone (Cell<sub>prob</sub>). These calculations are:

The sample weights derived at this stage are calculated as the inverse of the combined probability of selection, or:

$$1/(\text{LL}_{\text{prob}} + \text{Cell}_{\text{prob}} - \text{LL}_{\text{prob}} * \text{Cell}_{\text{prob}})$$

SSRS Panel Baseweight

The SSRS Probability Panel weighting procedures take into account the recruitment of panelists through the SSRS Omnibus, thus incorporating the Omnibus baseweight. The SSRS Probability Panel can reach non-Internet households by conducting telephone interviews of these panelists. For researchers who choose to just conduct interviewing of Internet panelists, SSRS applies a propensity score to model non-Internet households so that estimates can be projectable to the full U.S. population. Propensity scores are estimated by fitting a regression of the panel response status on a range of demographic and attitudinal covariates. Adjustments for each panel participant are then calculated as the reciprocal of the estimated response propensity found from the model.

The final SSRS Probability Panel baseweight is then calculated as the product of the panel adjustment and omnibus baseweight, divided by the summated mean of the panel adjustment and omnibus baseweight.

2. Post stratification weighting:

With the baseweight applied, the sample underwent the process of iterative proportional fitting (IPF), in which the sample was balanced to match known adult-population parameters based on the most recent March Supplement of the U.S. Census Bureau's Current Population Survey (CPS). This process of weighting will repeat until the root mean square error for the differences between the sample and the population parameters is 0 or near-zero.

The population parameters used for post-stratification are: age (18-29; 30-49; 50-64; 65+), gender, Census region (Northeast, North-Central, South, West), Education (less than high school, high school graduate, some college, four-year college or more); race/ethnicity (white non-Hispanic; Black non-Hispanic; Hispanic; Other non-Hispanic); and phone-usage (cell phone only, landline only, both).

3. Weight truncation ('trimming'):

To ensure the consistency of the population estimates produced week-to-week by the SSRS Omnibus, the weights will undergo truncation (or 'trimming') so that they do not exceed 3.5 or fall below 0.2. The survey has an overall margin of error of +/- 3.6 at the 95 percent confidence level.

Deliverables

Final deliverables for this study were a weighted SPSS file, final formatted questionnaire, codebook, and Methodology report.

For the final datafile, please note that when a respondent elected to skip a question they were coded as "-1: Web blank." A codebook is provided below.
